

SIXTH OF TWELVE PRELIMINARY ARTICLES ON THE BIG BATTLES

BRITISH SEND 350,000 TON COMME

By WILLIAM MAYARD HALE,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

General Headquarters of the German Army in the West, Sept. 28 (via Berlin and Tuckersburg, Tenn., 29).—The battle of the Somme continues in unaltered proportions. From noon Monday until Tuesday night the rage of steel and shrapnel was unintermittent, and the concussion of high explosives were one continuous resounding boom of anger.

In a world so beautiful as this, equipped with such sublime opportunities, it is impossible to bring oneself to realize that human beings are slaughtering each other at a rate never before paralleled on earth.

The other day twenty-six new prisoners were shot down out of the blue. Tuesday more than a dozen met the same fate. These continued rainings of the morning and evening that the thousands of victims lay them down and die inhumanly in the dust.

NEW BRITISH FORCES.
The whole world has contributed to send to these tragic areas the implements and devices of death which have been manufactured in far away places during the last year.

Furthermore, now have come the latest reinforcements, an expedition just sent from England. Under cover of darkness for the British lines, between September 15 and 18, the English dispatched two 11th and 12th divisions.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
The price of the offensive in the last five days of September has been a far more and heavier toll than from England. Under cover of darkness for the British lines, between September 15 and 18, the English dispatched two 11th and 12th divisions.

WAR SUMMARY

The "Big Push" by the allies in France continues, and today's official bulletins from the London and Paris War Offices show that both the French and British troops have made further gains of importance. The progress of "pocketing" Bapaume, which has been cut off from Peronne since the fall of Comblis, is being kept up. South of Bapaume the French have progressed on the Freigourt-Morval line, while the British to the northwest of Bapaume have advanced their lines on the Thiepval ridge, which dominates the northern valley of the Ancre.

The fall of Bapaume is believed to be near, as well as that of the village of Eaucourt l'Abbaye, which is already "pocketed" as a result of the British advances within the past forty-eight hours.

Another session of the Crown Council at Athens is believed today to be preparing, or to have prepared, the long-delayed ultimatum to Bulgaria, demanding the withdrawal of Bulgarian troops from Greece. Such an ultimatum would probably spell war. The statement that King Constantine has been won over to the side of the allies comes in Athens dispatches.

Meanwhile, in Greek Macedonia the Bulgarians do not appear to be preparing for a withdrawal. Instead, according to the French War Office announcement today, they are keeping up their attacks. Paris states that the Serbian defenders have again repulsed the Bulgarians.

The Serbs during the past few weeks have been showing something of the fighting spirit which characterized their spectacular defence of Belgrade, which included the smashing of a powerful Austrian army.

The expenditure is amazing and impossible of comprehension or belief to any one who has not been actually on the scene. By the day and night of continuous rain, the rain has been so heavy that the ammunition factories of the whole world will be able to furnish only a small quantity of explosives, and it is certain that they cannot continue doing so much longer.

Look for Quick Action by Greece
By SIDNEY H. CAYE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 28.—Greek revolutionaries have captured the island of Hydra. A dispatch to the Telegraph from Athens, Crete, this afternoon states that General Danglis, former chief of staff of the Greek army, has gone to Salonica to join the revolutionaries.

The whole fleet of torpedo boats in the Greek navy has deserted and joined the allied fleet.

New Agency dispatch from Athens reports the preparation of an ultimatum for Bulgaria.

The chief demand to be made upon Bulgaria is the evacuation of Greek soil, which the German allies had promised to respect.

Previously the entire Greek navy has deserted King Constantine, declaring their allegiance to Venizelos, the greatly loved and head of the revolutionary movement.

Repatriation for mobilization in Greece are being completed rapidly; it is understood here.

That Constantine has been won over to the side of those who favor Greek intervention on the allied side is no longer in doubt.

England, France, Russia and Italy have taken formal recognition of the provisional government set up in Crete by Venizelos by sending consuls to Crete.

As the revolution spreads in Greece the situation of the population is becoming more and more desperate. Famine prevails in many districts and there is a great scarcity of food. Uncertainty as to the government's position has led to widespread discontent. In many quarters no authority is recognized outside the unit of the army, which is armed troops.

Constantine, who is still suffering from his recent illness, maintaining a precarious equilibrium around both his person and his palace.

NEW ALLIED GAINS ON SOMME

London, Sept. 28.—The British and French, continuing their drive against the Germans south of the Somme, have made further progress today, according to the official reports of the war.

The British have captured a strong German position southwest of Le Barre, which is only about three miles from Bapaume, the main British objective.

The Paris communication reports that the French have made headway in their progress along the Freigourt-Morval line.

It is the evident purpose of the allies, by continued hammering, to drive their lines around Bapaume and force its abandonment by the Germans.

British Capture Strong German Work.
By SIDNEY H. CAYE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 28.—A strongly defended German position southwest of Le Barre on the Somme front was captured from the Germans in a night attack, it was stated in the official report of the War Office today.

North of Thiepval, the newly won positions of the British are being shelled violently.

The text of the official report follows: "The night was quiet on the greater part of the front. Position north of Thiepval are being heavily shelled. Our bombing parties active in the neighborhood of Schwaben, Redoubt and Heslun. French parts of which the enemy still hold. We have captured a strongly defended farm 500 yards southwest of Le Barre."

French Make New Progress on Somme.
By CHARLES F. BERTHELLE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Sept. 28.—French and British troops have begun to "pocket" Bapaume on the Somme front, as they did Comblis.

Bapaume, on the Somme front, as they did Comblis.

These attacks followed the British assaults northwest of Bapaume, on the ridge north of Thiepval, where they had advanced their lines.

An artillery duel of the utmost violence is raging both north and south of Bapaume, the river, the French says.

Bapaume is one of the three main objectives that the allies set out to reach when they began their big push in France on July 1, the other two being Comblis and Peronne.

The capture of Comblis cut the German main line of communication between Peronne and Bapaume.

With the French working toward the Bapaume road, a strategic high-way which the Germans hold south of Thiepval, the British have set out to clear the ridge stretching northward of Thiepval and in the direction of Eaucourt l'Abbaye, where the Germans have erected powerful fortifications.

By the capture of a re-entrant between the German lines, the French have captured a large section of the northern valley of the Ancre.

The text of the statement follows: "On the Somme our troops made new progress between Freigourt and Morval. There was an artillery battle of varying intensity both north and south of the line, but our gains were everywhere else."

On September 23 a German PzKorps moved to south north of Rheims. Another PzKorps was seriously damaged and forced to turn back to the German lines.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH INDICATES RENEWAL OF RUTHLESS U-BOAT WARFARE

sign will not be initiated until he returns or until definite word has been received that his mission has failed.

Germany, according to an authentic authority, considers that the time has arrived when the can and must take advantage of the last paragraph of her "unlucky note," in which it was made clear that her stand in the submarine issue might have to be re-examined if Washington failed to force

Great Britain to abandon the blockade as now carried out.

The gallery was crowded to capacity as the Reichstag opened. All foreign diplomats in Berlin were present. Among the Reichstag members were many in uniform. President Kaas of the chamber in his speech said that the military and economic and political war had reached its climax. Germany's position, he said, was "satisfactory in every respect."

He read telegrams exchanged with the Kaiser on the second anniversary of the war and with the president of the Hungarian Parliament at the fall of Turtakul fortress.

SPEECH APPLAUDED. His speech was greeted with applause. After the transaction of routine business Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg arose and deep sighs were taken to make his expected confession of faith.

He reviewed at length the diplomatic history preceding the German intervention. He declared that "play safe" and wait to see which side was sure of winning the war.

After the fall of President, he asserted, Premier Briand was ready to say "with Julius-line treason" for riches his country wished to gain for the smallest possible sacrifice. Negotiations with Russia struck a snag, however, the chancellor said, because both countries coveted Bukovina, while Romania in addition wanted to acquire the entire Hungarian territory as far as the Tisza. The German offensive and the continued allied advance finally succeeded in causing Romania to attack her ally with the allies, the chancellor said. She broke her treaty alliance with the central powers.

Karl Carol, Ferdinand's uncle, he added, died of a broken heart because the face of emphatic protestations to the central empire that she would remain neutral, but he emphasized that Germany was not deceived by the Romanians.

RUSSIAN ULTIMATUM.

The chancellor started the house by stating that Russia presented an ultimatum to Romania announcing that Russian troops would cross the Rumanian frontier if Russia did not end the war on the allied side by August 18.

"Whether this ultimatum was a surprise or not," said the chancellor, "it is not for me to decide. But the die was cast."

"The Russian military capitulation," continued the chancellor, "will prove a mistake as the political capitulation."

He asserted that Field Marshal von Mackensen's campaign in Rumania, which he had shattered the allied hope that the communication between the central powers and their eastern allies and to conquer Turkey, Bulgaria and Hungary separately.

"They hoped," he added, "that Rumania's population would cause the defection of Turkey and Bulgaria. But these nations are not their Rumanian ally. Truly, inevitably stands their ground."

DECLARES HIS CONTENT.

The chancellor declared his content for those circulating report that all Germany's means of fighting were not being employed to the fullest possible extent. He added that it was his duty to dissipate the enemy, "who is on watch for every breach of our inner determination," he would not give details.

"When in August, 1914," he went on, "we had to draw the sword we were forced to protect our hearth and home against a mighty and often overwhelming coalition of enemies, and still then unknown and often treacherous enemies, and still then there is only one watchword, namely, persevere and win. We will win."

After two years of fighting, struggling, suffering and dying, we know now as before that there is only one watchword, namely, persevere and win. We will win."

alone to declare our readiness for peace negotiations. I spoke on February 8, 1916, and repeatedly afterwards with sufficient clearness on that subject.

"There anyone dare to demand that we should make offers in the face of President Briand's declaration that the conclusion of peace today would be a sign of weakness, or that memory was dead." The speaker continues the war. He hopes to be able to attain Utopian war aims. The last of conquest of our enemies is responsible for the daily heaping mountains of corpses."

CHIEF OF REVENUE.

"French threat for revenge, Russian lust for conquest, and the English policy of isolating Germany and dominating the whole world—were named by the Chancellor as the underlying causes of the war. He took repeated occasion to refer to the latest official utterances of the French premier."

"Does Mr. Briand hope," he asked, "to obtain the last legacy of a less than peaceful peace by a war of annihilation, in which France's last youth after the devastated battlefield of Verdun?"

"In the face of President Briand's recent statement, that peace now would mean humiliation and a disgrace to memory, Germany," the chancellor said, "would not think of suggesting peace."

The chancellor referred reports that the Kaiser had in the past used his influence with the czar "to impede Russian revolution towards liberty."

He said arrangements of public life were "merely Russian business."

After reviewing the fighting in the East and asserting that all Russian attempts to break through had failed, he said the situation was equally favorable to the Germans, adding that the allied army at Salonika had been unable to make more than "feeble advances."

"My enemies," he continued, "must know the way because they turn to reach their ultimate aim. Their loss of conquest is guilty of mistakes of the enemy to the Homanstad water is becoming weaker. The Rumanians have been driven back toward the mouth."

Bulgars Capture

Line of Mountains

The capture of a line of mountains on the Italian front was reported by the Bulgarian War office today. Rumanian warships have bombarded Mangalia, which was recently captured by the Bulgars. The official report says:

"We have occupied the line of mountains between Lisets and Ignjovo. Two enemy torpedo boats and a cruiser bombarded Mangalia, destroying property."

(Mangalia is on the Black Sea, 100 miles from the Bulgarian coast.)

C. O'CONNELL GALVIN'S DEATH A SHOCK TO HIS MANY FRIENDS

C. O'Connell Galvin is dead. The news of the death of Mr. Galvin, veteran newspaperman, one of the most valued members of the Boston AMERICAN staff and leading authority on Irish political matters among newspaper writers in this country, will come as a shock to a unusually wide circle, for in addition to his friends, Mr. Galvin had a large personal following in the form of constant readers of his articles. He passed away after a brief illness. He was stricken Monday night with acute uraemic poisoning at his home, No. 44 Concord street, Cambridge. He lost consciousness at midnight Tuesday. Yesterday morning, after a convulsion of uraemia, he was removed to the St. Elizabeth Hospital in Brighton. He died at 9 o'clock last night at the age of fifty-three.

tion of those associated with him in his duties. But, beyond the qualities of efficiency, which made him superior in his chosen field of work, or of his ability and spontaneity, however, which were quick friends, there was a deep and underlying earnestness and tremendous earnestness which animated C. Galvin in a high standard of thought and endeavor.

BORN IN IRELAND. He was born in Cork, Ireland, son of Timothy Howard and Margaret O'Connell Galvin. He passed away at his home, No. 44 Concord street, Cambridge. He lost consciousness at midnight Tuesday. Yesterday morning, after a convulsion of uraemia, he was removed to the St. Elizabeth Hospital in Brighton. He died at 9 o'clock last night at the age of fifty-three.

His death took, in the prime of life, a man who had gained high repute in his work, whose articles were eagerly read and thoughtfully digested by the newspaper reading public, and who had the respect and affection of those associated with him in his duties.

He was educated at the Christian Brothers' School near Cork and at St. Patrick's Seminary. The foundation of learning which he received at the Brothers' School was supplemented by the academic courses of the Seminary and on this was raised a superstructure of long experience in newspaper work and the affairs of men.

He was early at his beloved work. He wrote for the Cork Examiner and other papers of his native city. He was the first experience in practical reporting, sent to Liverpool, worked on the Mercury, and finally landed in London on the Telegraph.

While on the Liverpool Mercury his political articles and reports attracted notice. He took an active interest in the House of Commons, which Parrell was leading. He reported many of Parrell's House of Commons speeches before the House of Commons.

In London he wrote special articles on proceedings in Parliament, especially those bearing on Irish questions. He made the acquaintance and gained the confidence and enduring friendship of the great Irish leaders, John F. Bismarck, then forerunner in the front, was a particular friend of the young newspaperman and the acquaintance between the two deepened to life-long affection.

CAME TO AMERICA. Despite his success in his London work, Mr. Galvin was ambitious to try his fortune in this country. He came to America twenty-seven years ago, landing in New York city. He secured work on the Sun, but was persuaded by a friend to leave the metropolis and transfer to Worcester, a move which eventually brought him to Boston.

In Worcester his life was rounded out by marriage, by family joys and responsibilities, and by seven years of activity in newspaper work and public affairs of the second largest city in the State. He was on the staff of the Worcester Post, at that time the high class newspaper of central Massachusetts.

Mr. Galvin lent to his work there his customary vigor and personality. He became an intimate friend of

Heartfelt Tribute to Memory of 'Con' Galvin

By REV. A. E. GEORGE.
"A good man dying, the world doth lose a light."
Those who knew "Con" Galvin and worked with him have lost a light in their lives.

They feel this now. Without con and with a sincerely marking all his transactions, it was comfort to seek "Con" as a shelter in all the storms and troubles of life.

He was a man. True manhood was an natural to him. His friendship ripened with every one who came to seek his advice. He was never self assertive, never presuming to doubt your sincerity even when he knew you to be wrong.

I was personally very fond of him, because of his true democracy and because of his hearty endorsement of everything that was fair and just.

Marked with intelligence, he lent his efforts to get the best things in the front line and he did it quietly and cheerfully.

While he had strong views on certain political questions, you could listen to him championing his own side because he was so faithful. He was just what he was—sincere, "Con" Galvin.

He came. Never again will we find him here to lean upon. Such was his life. The story of his life because they are always filling some niche in the world. We are the better for them.

The absence of life goodness and sympathy in around us today as we think of what he did and said to be, alone along.

We can see even now, his beaming face and his softly deep soul near his will.

May I not say we shall not soon look upon his like again, and say it with deep sincerity?

Lynn Librarian Resigns.
Miss Harriet L. Matthews, for almost fifty years connected with the Lynn Public Library and since 1905 the librarian, has resigned because of ill health.

IS NOW CURED OF STOMACH TROUBLE

Boston Lady Gives Strong Endorsement for the New Remedy, Plant Juice.

As health talks become more frequent, both from the pulp and from the newspaper, the more women are beginning to realize that the more cultivated have always known, namely, that good health cannot found in the powder box or rouge pot. This is the reason why many women, in this manner, but the more cultivated have always known, namely, that good health cannot be obtained by the use of these cosmetics. Many remedies can be purchased, but the best, in the opinion of most women, is Plant Juice, the new herbal system remedy. Thousands of women have been benefited by the use of this great preparation. Among them is Mrs. Joseph Plaffy, who lives at No. 45, 1/2 Washington street, Boston. She stated: "For 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and dyspepsia and all my food fermented in my stomach and caused gas to form there, and I could not eat or sleep and felt very miserable. I had palpitation of the heart, headache, and other troubles. I hardly got my breath when going up and down stairs and when I had any ambition or energy to do anything, I was a drag to me. I had no sleep and I was very nervous. I heard of Plant Juice through a friend and since I have taken it for four weeks I can eat anything, sleep well and my household is a pleasure. I am now a healthy woman and I cured me of all my aches and pains. I shall recommend Plant Juice to all my friends." The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Tilton store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the benefits of this remedy. Advertisement.

'BAT THE RAT' IS WOMEN'S SLOGAN

A campaign to exterminate rats in Boston was launched today by the Women's municipal League and given an official endorsement by Mayor Curley.

The first Piper role will be played by Mrs. Albert T. Leatherbee of Marlboro street, Back Bay, who today told the Mayor she had organized similar campaigns with success in Southern and Western cities.

FINED FOR TAKING PICTURES SUNDAY

Joseph Wojczak, a photographer of Dorchester avenue, South Boston, was found guilty in court today of taking pictures on the Lord's Day and was fined $10. He appealed. His counsel argued it was a custom of the Polish people to have their pictures taken immediately after a wedding and he could see no harm in taking a picture of a wedding group on Sunday. Judge J. J. Sullivan said that in this country, but that if they wished to take pictures on Sunday they would have to appeal to the legislature for special laws.

WATSON VIDITO OF MALDEN IS DEAD

BOYS AT FRONT ALMOST BAREFOOT

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 23.—Hundreds of the Boy State troops will have to be supplied with new shoes before starting Sunday on the hike which now promises to last fifteen days. Many of the men's feet are almost on the ground. Unless the quartermaster department hastens the supply of shoes demanded, "doughboys" with worn shoes might as well walk barefooted.

Colonel Edward L. Logan of the Sixth Regiment made his reputation in order to make sure that every man in the Ninth Regiment is properly shod for a march that will be difficult even under the best conditions.

El Paso was swept by Wintry blizzards. It is difficult for the New Englanders who were trained and hoisted in July and August to picture themselves in the same place.

Major Harry Chase of the signal corps is to introduce a new experiment during the hike. He will keep the head of the division in touch with the rear and every section with the supply and wagon trains by means of telephone and a system of signals.

Major Chase, because of the high standing of his outfit from Massachusetts has been placed in command of all signal companies in the division.

El Paso district, Captain George F. Kneass of Massachusetts Ambulance No. 1, will command all ambulance and field hospital companies in line.

Company of the Eighth Regiment, Captain George R. Penney, is to go in advance to Anthony, twenty miles from El Paso, and set up a station.

The arrival of two troops of cavalry from North Carolina, cheered the Rhode Island cavalrymen because it worked and unpacked last week, will start him Friday or Saturday.

Major Richards has filed a requisition for the transportation of eleven thousand, six officers and sixty-four horses. An ambulance and field hospital company also arrived from North Carolina.

EX-GOVERNOR WALSH TELLS OF LEGISLATIVE 'SCANDALS'

By BOB ALLEN.

El Paso, Texas, Sept. 23.—Early today Captain George Penney, with 111 members and two officers of M Company, Eighth Regiment, left camp Cotten for Anthony, a township in the Mexican state of Coahuila, to take part in the division march, which will start Saturday.

Late today army trucks will begin to arrive at Anthony with supplies for the troops, which are due to pass this point two days after the start is made.

The Eighth Regiment boys were transported to Anthony in army trucks and carried their full field equipment and five days' rations with them.

Villa Has 2,000 Near U. S. Border

President, Tex., Sept. 23.—Three American troops and four Mexicans were killed in a clash at Tloma on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, twenty miles from here, according to reports received here.

United States soldiers, who said to have crossed the border in attack at Tloma. A clash with Mexican troops followed.

Following a conference between Major A. V. P. Anderson, commanding the United States forces here, and Colonel Jose Rojas, Mexican commander at Tloma, across the river, it was reported that Francisco Villa with 2,000 followers in within fifty miles of Tloma.

He said to have asked the Americans for aid in the event of attack by Villa, as there is much confusion in the Carranza garrison.

In a battle fought between Carrancistas and Villistas at Chihuahua, across the river, it was reported that Carrancistas suffered losses numbering more than 100 men.

The Carrancistas casualties numbered more than 100 men, according to a report from General Trevino from General Matias Wain, General Trevino, the Carrancista commander, said he had himself been wounded.

can't do anything in the Legislature until you have seen the toils of those two lobbyists.

"If you call that doing anything, the Progressives must have had a pretty good place to start from."

Mr. Hale declared that the lobby could not be broken or corrupt legislators be made to perform their duty until Massachusetts had the initiative and referendum.

Former Governor David I. Walsh, agreeing with Mr. Hale, made the declaration quoted above. He added:

"I stand here today as a man in private life, seeking no office, but enjoying the experience of public men, and I say to you that never in my life was I more strongly convinced that there was need of the initiative and referendum."

A year ago the taxation committee of the Legislature came to me and I said to them: 'Gentlemen, has there appeared anybody before you who was not representing a private interest?'

"No," they said.

"You, then, are the only representative of the great millions? We stand there and agreed upon a taxation program that was in the best interests of all the people."

"RECAPITULATED PROMISE:" With twenty-four hours to go, the third of those had repudiated the solemn promise they had made to the Governor of Massachusetts. The special interests had seen their night.

Forrest Barker, now dead, who was chairman of the Tax and School Lighting Commission for thirty years, said:

"Governor, with the exception of the General Tax and School Lighting Commission, there was never a commission in public lighting appointed in this state."

not subservient to the big lighting interests?"

Joseph Walker, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, presided over the meeting. "We need the initiative and referendum," he said, "to break up the subterranean, unscrupulous and dishonest influences that so often control legislation."

Philip Davis of the Civil Service House said the initiative and referendum would begin by educating the immigrants in the great political principle.

"We want the initiative and referendum to educate the scheming unscrupulous American citizens of the type that now runs legislation up there on Beacon Hill," former Governor Walsh insisted.

DISHEARTENED AT TIMES. Bernard J. Russell, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said it was disheartening at times that the voters re-elected men whose records were amply worthy their first practice.

Mrs. Katherine Millett, who came down from the Berkshire to attend the meeting, said that the western country of the State was expected to roll up a substantial majority for the initiative and referendum this fall.

A letter from Governor Fox, who was ill, pleading his untiring assistance in the movement, was read. Professor Lewis J. Johnston of Harvard University and Bernard M. Allen, an instructor at Phillips Andover Academy, outlined the means that should be adopted to win the fight.

EARLE WILLIAMS AND TWELVE PRETTY GIRLS IN A BIG RED AUTO- MOBILE ARE COMING TO TOWN

They will appear at leading motion picture theatres in a series of twelve novel photo dramas.

C. N. and A. M. Williamson, the celebrated novelists, have written the stories of these thrilling automobile adventures. The Greater Vitaphon has dramatized and produced them in pictures.

The Scarlet Runner—the big red car—plays an important part in each mystery and adventure.

Christopher Race, the owner of the Scarlet Runner, is Earle Williams.

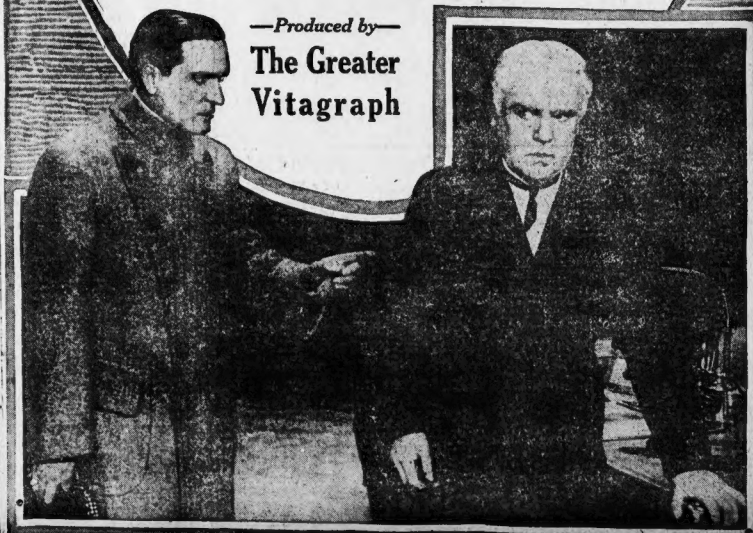

He is a twentieth century knight errant—a knight of the automobile—always seeking adventure, always coming to the rescue of some distressed maiden.

He is as bold and daring with his red racer as any plumed and armored knight of the middle ages.

Each of the twelve pictures in which Earle Williams plays the leading role is a complete story. But each has a different heroine. See them all with

HAPPENINGS IN LOCAL SOCIETY

Miss Christine Snelling Will Become the Bride of Loring Wilkins Coleman.

Miss Christine Snelling, daughter of Mrs. Russell G. Snelling of No. 412 Marlboro street, and a debutante of two years ago, is expected to be one of the coming social season's brides, her engagement having been announced to Loring Wilkins Coleman, Harvard 1916, of Chicago.

Miss Snelling belongs to the Lawrence Circle League and is a prominent member of the Vincent Club. She ranked as one of the most attractive debutantes of her season.

A marriage of wide importance is that of Miss Constance Jackson and Wilfred R. Shrigley, which will be solemnized November 1.

Miss Jackson is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Jackson of Chestnut Hill avenue, Brighton. She is a member of the 1914 Sewing Circle and her engagement, which was announced last spring, was one of the most talked of betrothals of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daniels Leach, 54, have sent out cards announcing that they will be at home after November 4 at their Concord home. Mrs. Leach was the Countess de Pierrefort's recent marriage, and Miss Tudor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tudor of Beacon street, when she was married to Count Pierrefort. The Count was killed while doing duty in the French Ambulance Corps last spring a year ago.

The annual bazaar of the Florence Crittenton League will be held at the Copley-Plaza November 7 and 8. The event is one of the largest and most appealing of the season's charities and interests a wide circle of Boston society. It will be in the state ballroom and the both assemblies will be presided over by many members of the smart world and friends of the league.

Mrs. Francis R. Crewsfield, Mrs. Charles F. Lyman, Mrs. Louis Bacon and Mrs. James Curtis are among the patronesses for the ball to be given in aid of the Sunnyside Day Nursery. The event will be at the Copley-Plaza, in the large ballroom on November 1, and will be one of the most interesting social functions of the early season.

CAR AND AUTO
IN COLLISION

Miss Geraldine Lord of Pittston, Me., was seriously injured and three other persons were cut and bruised last night, when an automobile and a street car had a head-on collision at the junction of Green and Main streets, Wakefield.

Miss Christine Snelling, whose engagement to Loring Wilkins Coleman has been announced.

Malden Plague
Patients Treated
With New Serum

Two new cases of infantile paralysis in Malden were given the serum treatment today under direction of the recently organized Infants Paralysis Commission of Harvard Medical School.

The patients are seven-year-old Mary Cheever, daughter of Joseph M. Cheever of Clifton street, whose water certificate died of infantile paralysis last Saturday, and three-year-old Joseph Brown, Jr., of No. 215 Oliver street.

The cases were discovered in the fever ward and before patients set in. The Harvard commission was notified. It sent experts with serum to each household today and the serum, taken from the blood of recovered patients, was administered.

The patients were then removed to the Malden Cottage Hospital. The cases are being followed with tense interest by the physicians in charge to see how the new serum works. It is said that each case is a "good one," medically speaking, for the serum treatment, having been brought to the committee's attention at just the right time.

MISSING SINCE
EVE OF WEDDING

Frank J. Harty, junior member of the shoe manufacturing firm of Pease J. Harty Sons, Lynn, which failed a year ago, has been missing. It became known today, since August 29, six days before the date set for his wedding to Miss Margaret O'Donnell of a Chicago couturier.

Miss O'Donnell has been protesting the disappearance of her fiancé, who was finally compelled to send her away hoping to regain her recovery with a change of scene.

Harty, who lives at No. 22 New Park street, Lynn, had promised to call on Miss O'Donnell the Wednesday before the wedding, to complete the arrangements for the wedding. He failed to appear. Becoming worried, Miss O'Donnell investigated and learned the he had called on the New York Times.

Miss O'Donnell is but nineteen years old. She was formerly a secretary in Harty's own factory. They had been keeping out of the public eye, their friends declared that the wedding had at first been set for the summer of 1915, but was postponed by Miss O'Donnell at Harty's request.

"My daughter," Mrs. O'Donnell said today, "is in New Hampshire, nursing a broken heart."

FRANK MARSHALL KILLS HIMSELF

Frank Marshall, a well-to-do restaurant owner in the Fenelon Hill Market district, shot himself twice and died late Thursday, it became known today, following the investigation of a mysterious shooting in a taxicab in front of the Marshall home, No. 44 Naples road, Brookline.

There were confused accounts today of just how Marshall had killed himself. One report was that he had shot himself in the taxicab resulting in the call for the police ambulance. This version was borne out by the taxi driver.

Later members of the family said that if Marshall shot himself while in the taxi, the shot was with and the shot which killed him was fired by him in the home.

His health was blamed. Dependence brought about by continued ill health was responsible for his act, according to the story told today by Carl E. Marshall, his son, and former Harvard football captain. "My father had suffered from heart trouble for a long time," he said today.

"The poor state of his health was entirely responsible for his act. Yesterday he was at his place of business in Merchants row for a few minutes only and arrived home at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. He found a note pinned to his door which told him that he had been shot in the taxicab.

"Then he entered the house and shot himself. My mother was alone in the house at the time.

"She became very much excited when she heard the shot, she called several physicians on the telephone, and that undoubtedly caused much excitement.

"This brought the ambulance to the house. My father did not go away in the ambulance, however, because he was made comfortable at the home.

"He lived for several hours after the shot was fired, dying in the early evening.

"I understand that Joseph H. McCarthy, president of the Taxi Service Company, notified the police. My father was fifty-eight years old. He was on the best of terms with the members of the family and had no quarrel with anybody so far as I know."

Irving Marshall, another son at the Marshall home, today confirmed the story told by Carl, and said it was correct in every detail.

Dr. William C. Marks of College street, assistant medical examiner of Norfolk County, who was called to attend Marshall, refused to issue any statement in regard to the affair.

Funeral services for Mr. Marshall will be held Sunday.

Mr. Marshall was born in South Acton fifty-eight years ago. He had been in the restaurant business since 1872.

The Jones & Marshall restaurant in Merchants Row, where he was a partner, is one of the best known restaurants in the city and is much frequented by business men in the market district.

The business was prosperous and Marshall is understood to have acquired a comfortable fortune. The home in Brookline is in one of the best sections of the town and is fairly apartment.

One of the sons, Ralph S. Marshall, is connected with the restaurant business.

Carl Marshall is a former captain of the Harvard football team, where he played quarterback for several years.

WOMAN SLAIN IN OSSIPPEE COTTAGE

train yesterday afternoon. He had left the cottage on the lake shore at 3 o'clock, and was driven to the depot by George Kennett, employed by E. C. Couzens, who owns a ferry stable.

"I didn't see Mrs. Small anywhere around the house when I went to carry Mr. Small to the station," said Kennett today.

STARTED FOR BOSTON. Small started for Boston, seven hours after he left the cottage, or about 10 o'clock last night, the villagers in Mountain View saw a glare from the direction of the lake.

Some of them went that way and discovered the Small cottage after.

They knew Mrs. Small was inside, for there was no sign of her about the cottage. But the flames had so embraced the whole cottage that it was hopeless to think of rescue.

The general belief at that time was that the fire had caught accidentally, and that Mrs. Small had been overcome in sleep.

She was known to live alone in the house when her husband was away. Small had arrived in Boston manfully and registered as usual at Young's Hotel.

A telephone call informed him that his cottage had burned, his wife apparently inside. He hurried at once to return to his home.

HUSBAND UNDER GUARD. Upon his arrival there Sheriff Chandler, at the direction of the medical examiner, locked him in a room at the Central Hotel under guard.

No charge was made against him, however.

The medical referees, Dr. Horne of Conway, and Dr. E. W. Hoston, whom he succeeded in office, hurried to the village on word of the tragedy. Because they believed the woman had been burned to death, their services were legally required.

They went to the cottage when the fire in the smoldering embers had died, and were able to see what had happened.

The fire had apparently started in the cellar. It burned away the supports of the lower floor, that floor itself, and the walls supporting the upper floor.

Mrs. Small's room was on this upper floor. The weight of the bed in which her body lay broke through both floors and bed and body fell into the cellar.

FELL INTO POOL. The shock of the fall jolted Mrs. Small's body from the bed. It rolled into a corner of the cellar, where a pool of water had formed on the cement floor.

The water sufficiently moistened the clothes in which she was bound to protect her body from the flames, and although the clothes were charred, it was a simple matter to see that she had been bound hand and foot, gagged, half-strangled with a cloth around her neck and mouth and terribly leech.

The medical examiners instantly agreed that she was dead before the fire started, and declared that she was murdered, and that the fire was set to cover up the crime.

RED SOX ARE FAVORITES IN WORLD'S SERIES BETTING

Betting on the Red Sox to win the World's Series against the team now in the lead for the pennant in the National League, a Tremont street business man, well-known in sporting circles, today placed a wager of $1,000 against $1, so certain is he that his favorite team will be victorious.

The wager was made following controversy which bubbled up following yesterday's game when the Red Sox went down in defeat before the Yankees by a score of 4 to 3 in a hard fought game in Fenway Park.

Present when the bet was made were baseball fans who frequent the Boston Stock Exchange and others who spend their spare time in the vicinity of Clark's Hotel. The stakeholder is a well-known insurance man, it is alleged, a written agreement for the betting that the money is not to be turned over to either until the last game in the coming World Series is finished.

But this was not the only bet recorded today. There were many small wagers made, all favoring the Red Sox with odds of two to one. Bookmakers were conspicuous in the "sport section" in Washington street, between Franklin and Milk streets, putting out posters for bets. Baseball fans who frequent that section engaged in heated conversations concerning the coming series and many backed their arguments with bets ranging from $10 to $100 on an even basis that the successful National League team to win the pennant would put it over the Sox in the World Series.

Very few bets were made down around the Boston Stock Exchange in Doane street. One baseball enthusiast is recorded in placing a bet of $100 even that the Sox would win the coming series. It is expected, though, that a wealthy investor will be given to baseball betting on the curb when the successful National League team is pitted against the Sox.

"Things are rather quiet in the betting line down here," said a curb broker, when asked how the World Series looked to him from a betting viewpoint.

"To date there is little interest in that line, due no doubt to the fact that the Braves have been in third place. The boys down here would like to see the Braves and Red Sox fight it out. It now looks as if the Sox will get congratulations with the Dodgers. Till that is definitely settled I do not look for any heavy betting."

Yale Backs Sent to Old Berths

New Haven, Sept. 25.—Coach Ted Jones returned his regulars to the backfield, using Smith, Bingham, LaDore and Jacques in their old places. They will probably start tomorrow's game with Carnegie Tech.

The lack of reserve material showed itself in the poor defensive character of the scrub defense which allowed Jacques, LaDore and Bingham to get through for a touchdown apiece during the thirty minutes accumulating.

During the second half Lallochia, Hutchinson, Saville and Waite were given the backfield positions. LaDore is the ninth candidate (red) as quarterback on the varsity. His field generalship has placed him on almost even terms with Travis Smith, who has excelled in favoring an offensive line.

The only real change in the line-up of the varsity consisted in placing tackle, freshman guard last year, at right guard, replacing Jenner, who was injured Wednesday. Jack Warren and Jack Taylor joined the coaches.

NO RACING AT COLUMBUS. Columbus, O., Sept. 25.—If the weather and track permits, yesterday's postponed Grand Circuit card will be raced off today. The meeting is expected to be a close tomorrow.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

FICKLENESS. Brallinger men are a double bunch. At they have on their rocky way. Having won them too, you conceive a bunch.

They will lose one again today. So you stay away from the baseball park.

Where they fell in the bottom run. As you read the score when the day grows dark. And you learn that the Braves have won.

They are asle as over a bunch has been. That occurred in baseball shape. For they always lose when you think they'll win.

And they win when you think they'll lose. A consolation can be found in every situation. If you are drawing a native from Ionia, Mark, you never will be troubled with grief.

There is a difference in attendance between a light-weight bout of local and a light-weight pugilist. A heavy-weight pugilist is always a well-attended, whereas, a light-weight bout is always a lull.

Speaking of weight, if free lunch were abolished a lot of the heavyweights would be looking for malchra with Johnny Kilbane.

Announcement of this Live Store's readiness to supply ALL men with Better Clothes for the Better Times

GOOD CLOTHES were never in such demand as they are today. Men are revising their ideas of what is good enough. They devote more attention to style. They want better fabrics and better fit. They are coming to realize that really fine merchandise is a sound investment and the cheapest in the end.

THIS LIVE STORE has gained full recognition as headquarters for fine merchandise as well as greater value-giving. Our stock and our prices for this Fall and Winter season will still further enhance the enviable reputation we have already earned. We offer advantages you can't afford to overlook.

IN STYLES, we offer the best ideas of America's greatest designers; in fabrics, the highest grade product of the most reliable mills; in tailoring, the finest workmanship that specialization has attained; in fit, a degree of perfection beyond anything heretofore known; and as to prices—

We refer to our recent statement that in spite of the shortage of good dyes and woollens, and the increased cost of everything entering into the making of clothes, we shall sell 85% of our Fall goods at just the same prices as last year and still maintain the quality.

Kuppenheimer Suits

Hint at Haughton Plot Story Hits Stallings

Nevertheless, the rumor continues. Several players are said to be in the front row and ready to jump on him. President Haughton was seldom seen in his old place in his private box back of the players' dugout, preferring a rear seat in the grandstand or passing the time in the newsroom in the press box, where he was usually liked and was full of comment about the game.

The plan was supposed to be for Stallings to turn in another "miracle" and lead the Braves to a winner. This would so impress the stockholders with the ability of the clever man from Hartford, that they would be willing to let him have the club even without the usual bidding and their first vote would be his.

B. C. Eleven Off for Hanover

Coach Drickley put the finishing touches on the Boston College varsity football team at Alumni Field yesterday afternoon in preparation for tomorrow's game with Dartmouth. The squad, totaling twenty-seven players, left for Hanover this morning in a special Pullman.

Yesterday's practice showed the team at its best so far. Drilling and heavy work was discarded, emphasis being laid on the fundamentals, running through signals and trying forward passes.

Philatrick and Fitzgerald were given a season in punting. Jerry Drickley, the former Crimson All-American, took the line men a hard time for last drilling and both squads were put through light practice in offensive and defensive work.

Several shifts in the line, with the addition of Lowmy in the backfield, and the correction of the evils that appeared in last Saturday's game with the Neponset Wanderers, resulted in a stronger eleven than appeared a week ago.

Jack Sullivan, who was shifted from guard to center this week, has been showing good form in his new position and from all appearances should do well against the Green.

DAUBERT GAINS 4 POINTS IN HOT BATTING RACE

Everything was quiet along the National League batting front Thursday; that is, so far as the race for the batting championship is concerned. "Fat" Chase, the leader, was idle, and so was Roger Hornsby. Jake Daubert and Zack Wheat, however, had a little feud between themselves, and Daubert, hitting against Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Phils, made a gain of four points upon his teammate.

In three times up the Dodger first baseman made two hits and boosted his averages two points. In four times at bat Wheat went hitless and lost two points.

Here is how the four leaders stand to date:

	At bat	Hits	Avg
Chase	529	177	.334
Daubert	461	149	.321
Wheat	552	174	.315
Hornsby	489	152	.311

The batting in the American League was again dormant, and the figures on the Spokan and Ty Cobb remained the same as follows:

	At bat	Hits	Avg
Spokan	633	203	.324
Cobb	527	191	.362

ALL SAINTS AND NEPONSET BATTLE

The third and final game of the series between the All Saints Nine of Roxbury and the Neponset Catholic Club will be played tomorrow at the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester. The series has already won all the interest and the deciding contest promises all kinds of excitement. The teams will line up as follows:

Fullerton's World Series articles, some of which have already appeared in the AMERICAN, made an instant hit with the baseball "fans." They've scored heavily and from every angle. Fullerton has his own pet way of figuring out baseball's class, and his statistics generally turn out to be facts. Don't miss this series. It's running daily in the AMERICAN, and also appears as a leading feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

The first of Camp's football stories will be published in next Sunday's AMERICAN. It deals with the early practice of the big college elevens and is written in true Camp style. It is one of the stellar contributions of the "Father of American Football."

Casey's Play Feature

The Harvard varsity was given a light workout in the Stadium this afternoon. With the Bates contest drawing near, Coach Leary confined the work of his charges to light drill on the defense, and fundamentals.

A pretty good kick for a field goal by Eddie Casey, sub fullback, was the feature of yesterday afternoon's practice. It was driven from the 33-yard line with timely accuracy. The regulars and second team had alternated in trying to rush the ball, with little success on either side. Casey's kick took the grip out of the scrubs and two more scores were made in the next twenty minutes.

The forward pass figured largely in the scheme of successful play by the varsity. The regulars, after having twenty yards through skin tackle and center rushes, gave it first when they caught Minute forward pass and shot behind the line.

The second touchdown was the result of a fumbled punt by the scrubs in the former's thirty. It was intercepted by the regulars, who ran it in for a touchdown. The scrubs were given a light workout in the Stadium this afternoon.

The "Soft Snap" a Curse to Any Man

Mr. "Soft Snap" Remains a Nobody. His "Soft Snap" Holds Him Down

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company.

HE DOES NOT SEE THE WEIGHT ON HIS LEG

"SOFT SNAP" is an American expression and a world-wide evil. The man engaged in the work that slung calls a "soft snap" thinks himself fortunate. He is to be pitied.

He is like the man in this picture, held fast, deprived of advancement by the very thing that he values—his "soft snap."

Many a policeman on hard duty envies the "special assignment man" who sits indoors, does little work, and endures no hardship.

But it is not the special assignment man that will become the head of a force, or, leaving the force in due time with the experience that it gives, make a career on a bigger scale.

The young fireman need not envy his mate assigned to duty in a theatre, with no work harder than watching young ladies come out and sing. It is not in the lobby of a theatre that a fireman develops into a man of success.

Workers in offices, stores, factories, all foolishly envy the man who gets a sufficient salary for insufficient work.

Such men should be PITIED, not envied. They usually begin as men of superior intelligence. They have the cunning, ability or plausibility to get the "soft snap" that makes their life unnecessary.

The ability which enabled them to get that easy berth might have given them success, something worth while, in the field of real work and struggle.

Phelps, of Pittsburgh, with his fifty or one hundred millions, and his palace in Fifth avenue, did not have a "soft snap." He sold gunpowder in a store, closed the store at night, then walked six miles to keep a set of books for a blacksmith, and walked six miles back. No "soft snap" there. And lucky for Phelps that there was none.

Abraham Lincoln, before he began his real work, applied for a position in one of the Washington departments. It was not a position hard to fill. It would have paid him a few thousand dollars a year, and he might have kept it all his life.

What might have happened to the United States, and what to Abraham Lincoln, if he had got that "soft snap"? But he failed to get it in spite of his efforts. He was thrown back into the world of hard fighting, and he knew what happened. Lucky for all of us that Lincoln failed to get the "soft snap."

A great blessing to the human race was the French revolution. The genius of Mirabeau, his famous speech at the "Salle du jeu de paume" was the spark that set fire to the revolutionary powder.

Mirabeau was a nobleman and the son of a nobleman. He sought to gain favor with the King and the Queen. He tried for one of the many "soft snaps" for which the people paid and against which they rebelled.

But the court would not have him; his father put him in jail because of his extravagance. He was kicked out of his own class, found a soft berth nowhere, and went in with the common people to live for France and the rest of the world.

Dante developed his genius and wrote the book that has lived for centuries only AFTER he had been driven from his native city, after the things that he asked had been refused him, and he had known what it was, as he said, to hold out his hand for bread on the public highway.

Shakespeare was whipped by gamekeepers, jailed for poaching, married against his will to a woman older than himself whom he did not like, and his father's failure meant deep poverty. He went to London, where he lived in a garret, and for a few pennies while the rulers watched the show, and BECAME THE REAL SHAKESPEARE.

If the loyal musician, Sir Thomas Lucy, had given Shakespeare a "soft snap," making him gamekeeper with a little lodge, all the genius might have been wasted over pots of ale in a tavern at Stratford.

Why do you read ninety times out of a hundred that the man who achieved great success or rendered great service to the human race began and for many years lived in hardship? It is because poverty, dissatisfaction, necessity stimulate AMBITION. And ambition alone makes greatness.

The "soft snap" that the young American seeks, and the other foolish American envies, kills ambition and kills the future.

In the nobility of England are thousands born to wealth and it. All inherited the British "soft snap."

England bears little or nothing from them. Two men were born poor, struggled for everything they got. One, Alfred Harmsworth, now Lord Northcliffe, is the son of an Irish woman; the other, Lloyd George, son of a Welsh woman. These two men, born with nothing except ambition, ARE THE TWO THAT IN A HUNDRED YEARS HAVE DONE THE GREATEST GOOD TO ENGLAND.

Northcliffe has done his work through fearless criticism, Lloyd George by unrelenting constructive work.

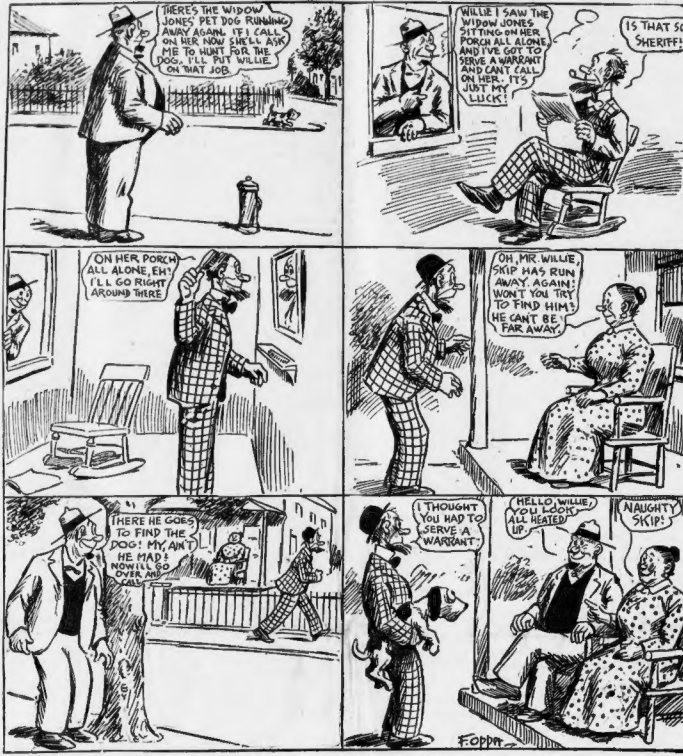

Let others seek the "soft snap." YOU look for work to develop what is in you.

The School as a Larger Home

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

THE new systems of education proceed to recognize home work or outside labor when necessary and within reasonable limits, and to even incorporate it into their scheme of education.

Mrs. Johnson, for instance, at Fairhope, makes domestic science and all forms of housework, for girls and gardening and care of animals, for boys, regular subjects in the curriculum, with marks for proficiency in them. So that youngsters who have home work or chores to do can do them as part of the school-day's work, and, if necessary, during school hours. Then, at the end of the term, they are given pieces of test work to do, and graded upon the skill with which they perform them, and this, combined with the report of the "instructor" at home, determines their standing.

So interesting did the children find these studies and so highly did they value their markings in them, that those who, for various reasons, had either no need or no opportunity to do certain kinds of work at home would ask permission to enter other houses in the town, especially those that were notable for their high standards of good housekeeping and efficiency. And the school actually enrolled, with the kindly co-operation and consent of the ladies of the house, a number of these home laboratories as "annexes" to which practical work in domestic science could be taken. The Gary system meets the problem by providing one "loose" or free period in every day, which the children can spend either at a rationalized and attractive form of "chaper" exercises, or upon written request of their parents, in music lessons, drawing lessons, instruction in religion, or home work or duties of any sort. If this single period is not sufficient, that one of the playground or open-air periods can be taken for the same purpose, and the teachers make a special point of endeavoring to connect up and utilize—in pedagogic pattern, "correlate"—this home or outside work with some one of their studies. Sometimes taking the occupation or some of the substances or fabrics with which it deals, as the subject of the lesson or series of lessons, and having the boy or girl describe their experience and tell the class all they know about the subject. Then the class is set to read up and inform itself upon that subject for another period, when the matter is discussed fully and freely, each criticizing the statements made by the others.

Then if the subject happens to have historical or geographic or literary bearings of interest—it always has scientific, of course—these are taken up and followed out. Thus the school work is made practical and interesting, and the home work intelligent and improving, and what is perhaps best of all, the boy or girl who has to do the work, instead of being in any way made to feel lessened or humiliated by it, is given rather a place of honor in the discussion and helped to recognize the dignity and importance and broad relations of the thing.

How much more there is in the sun's rays than light and warmth! Do we not DEMAND of the sun that it give us, quite apart from these things, good cheer, health, strength, laughter and joy?

How much more the waters hold for us than to quench our thirst, cleanse our bodies and soothe our aches! The blue waters of the sea, the clear, rippling brooks, and the silent, flowing river, each has its message. Besides the physical light, the shadows of the sun give us a new perspective from their spiritual light and spiritual inspiration.

How much more we demand of a person than the material benefit he may be able to bestow! After all, do we not cry out—it may be in the bitterness of humiliation—it is the spirit of the giver that we want?

It is the soul's response to the spiritual in things and persons that establishes the true values of life, and all things and all persons contain a hidden spiritual value that may or may not be applied to ourselves, never really less the invisible drama that leads us up and onwards.

Story of Lincoln's Life Should Never Weary Citizens of U. S.

Garrett P. Serviss Shows Error of Memphis Man Who Thinks Continual Praise of Great Emancipator Is Useless

By Garrett P. Serviss

I HAVE been reading about the weariness of a man in Memphis over the praise of Abraham Lincoln. He admits that Lincoln was a great and noble man, but he is tired of hearing about the adulation of Mont Blanc as the American people of the celebration of Lincoln's career.

The Athenians sometimes manifested the same kind of impatience, and Pericles in his famous oration warned them against it. He told them they should never let themselves grow weary of hearing the praises of the men who had made Athens great.

The Memphis man offers a very singular explanation of his annoyance. Why insist so much upon the wonderfulness of Lincoln's rise from poverty and a log cabin to the White House and the forefront of the western world, when everybody knows that in Lincoln's time, and in his part of the country, it was the general rule to begin life in the most humble circumstances? Abraham Lincoln was by no means the only man born in a log cabin, and too poor to go to school, who emerged out of obscurity in these days. So where is Lincoln's special merit?

It is true that plenty of men from the log cabins of the West in the early half of the nineteenth century became lawyers, doctors, preachers, teachers, merchants, politicians, editors, capitalists, farmers—but how many of them can you name today? Only one became, I will not say President of the United States, because ordinary men have sometimes got into office, but the least of a nation through a great crisis, and the broadest-minded statesman of his day.

It was not the manner of his rise, for that he shared with many of his contemporaries, but the extent of it that won Lincoln's immortal fame. It is the great, shining peak that glories a mountain range, not the general elevation. They wear the mantles of ermine, and catch the first and last rays of the sun; it is to them that the valleys look, and of them that praises are spoken and written.

As well might Chamonix tire of the adulation of Mont Blanc as the American people of the celebration of Lincoln's career.

Contrast Lincoln with Grant. They are like the two sides of a medal where the artist has made obverse and reverse equally admirable, though totally different. Of the two, Grant seems to me the more miraculous. Both rose from humble beginnings, but Lincoln's progress was continuous; he was always going ahead and gaining a little, while Grant often receded.

We can see every step of Lincoln's upward way, for he was continually in the public eye and kept himself in training all the time. He tried many things and gave them up one after another, but never really went backward.

If there had been no war of rebellion, and no "rebel" tide in America, Lincoln would have become a very notable figure in our history, but the war "made" Grant. From Lincoln studying law in Bowling Green's shanty to Lincoln issuing the proclamation of emancipation there is no break; it is one long steady upward slope.

But between Grant hawking cordwood in the streets of St. Louis in 1840, and Grant capturing Fort Donelson, and giving a new direction to the war in 1862, the line of connection is broken. Between those two dates his life curve attained what mathematicians call a point of inflection, and the direction of curvature changed.

Comparing the lessons that the two teach, Grant's appears the less conventional. As the Memphis man says, it is not an uncommon thing—or it was not uncommon before 1860—for Americans to rise out of poverty into eminence, but it is always and everywhere interesting to watch such careers.

The Spiritual in Things

By G. Vere Tyler

THE most delecting of all things is to come in contact with the man who deals in hard facts, denying or ignoring the influence of the spiritual or supernatural.

It is better for one to believe in ghosts, to be illumined by the thought of the presence or guidance of the spirits of the other world, than to have only the sun upon the bare, cold, crust facts of our material existence.

The shadows the trees throw upon the ground are as real and as much a part of them as the branches and leaves. And they are as much considered by the artist who paints a tree as the tree itself. And so it is with the impressions of the spiritual; these shadows of the real that are necessary to the development of our lives into harmonies.

We need never fear that in the pursuit of the intangible, that which we try to see in the spiritual will ever encroach upon the daily facts of life. Facts are so self-evident, self-assertive and persistent, that in order to endure them we should attempt to escape them, while that which is of the spiritual order of things is so intangible and elusive that it is advisable that we keep ourselves as far as possible from the highest, for in order to get either its imaginary or real benefit.

How much more there is in the sun's rays than light and warmth! Do we not DEMAND of the sun that it give us, quite apart from these things, good cheer, health, strength, laughter and joy?

How much more the waters hold for us than to quench our thirst, cleanse our bodies and soothe our aches! The blue waters of the sea, the clear, rippling brooks, and the silent, flowing river, each has its message. Besides the physical light, the shadows of the sun give us a new perspective from their spiritual light and spiritual inspiration.

How much more we demand of a person than the material benefit he may be able to bestow! After all, do we not cry out—it may be in the bitterness of humiliation—it is the spirit of the giver that we want?

It is the soul's response to the spiritual in things and persons that establishes the true values of life, and all things and all persons contain a hidden spiritual value that may or may not be applied to ourselves, never really less the invisible drama that leads us up and onwards.
